Sela Botwin, Provost

The meeting was opened with the provost's report. The provost discussed the strategic plan which will allow students to interact with Israeli students in a dedicated space at YU. This is facilitated by a donation for that purpose.

The council members followed with questions regarding the academic nature of the student credit credits will be evaluated.

The provost distributed a fact book and a policy manual containing information required by the state. Dr. Botwin said that Middle States now visit campuses once every seven years but the evaluation is data driven and focuses on specifics.

The provost included in her report a table maintained by YU faculty detailing grant information she received and included a discussion of grant proposals.

The provost then had to leave.

The next item on the agenda was a report by Charles Swenson on the role of our specific senate. The role of senates in various universities was distributed.

Charles suggested that the role of the faculty council so far has been to listen to reports and that there was very little that was actually accomplished.

A discussion on the senate passed several resolutions:

The second resolution called for the establishment of two permanent academic affairs committee and the other budget and financial committee. It was passed and the council said it would iron out the details in the next meeting.

The third resolution, also adopted unanimously said that the council would work toward approval rights of programs via changes in the faculty handbook.

The council then went into an executive session.
