

ABSTRACT

There is significant research in the areas of neural muscular re-education and their efficacy in treating Bell's palsy. The symptoms of secretion management, changes in speech production and oral preparatory swallowing concerns lend this to be an area of speech-language pathologist's engagement. There are efficacious non-p