Prof. Matt Miller

The Russian writer Levolstoy began his classic novelina Karenina y claiming that "happy families are all alike," while "every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way." Perhaps he was right. Certainly, many American writers have explored the drama and crises that arise or unhappy families. Some families depicted in American literature have courageously risen to the challenges they faced, overcame them (to some extent) and lived, if not "happily ever after," then at least happily enough. Other families have also been depted tragically, of course, and many have been described as a balance of tragedy and triumph, comedy and cleaved realism.

American literature began to focus on parents and children with particular intensity beginning in the midnineteenth century witthe growth of a literary movement known as "realism." Whether in novels, poetry, short stories, plays, or memoirs, an intense interest in parents and children continues in literature to the present day. This course explores the roles of parents and childrand how those roles have changed over-time in the work of a wide variety of American authors, including William Dean Howells, Willa Cather, William Faulkner, Lorraine Hansberry, Sylvia Plath, Allen Ginsberg, Toni Morrison, and others. While the writinwe explore may not resolve the challenges of growing up or raising a child, it will surely shed a light on and help to beMC /P <</MCID 43>> BDC
